Methodology

Welcome to the 2022 Banking, Finance and Transactional Law Expert Guide, the international legal market's leading guide to the top legal practitioners advising on banking, finance and transactional law.

When first published in 1994, the Expert Guides were the first-ever guides dedicated to leading individuals in the legal industry. Since then we have continued to focus on individuals considered by clients and peers to be the best in their field.

Our research process involves sending over 4,000 questionnaires to senior practitioners or in-house counsel involved in each practice area in over 80 jurisdictions, asking them to nominate leading practitioners based on their work and reputation. The results are analysed and screened for firm, network and alliance bias. The list of experts is then discussed and refined with advisers in legal centres worldwide.

Our researchers have compiled a list of specialists in 86 jurisdictions for this guide. These specialists have been independently offered the opportunity to enhance their listing with a professional biography. The biographies give readers valuable, detailed information regarding each lawyer's practice and, if appropriate, their work and clients.

We owe the success of this guide to all the in-house counsel and firms that completed questionnaires and met our researchers. Thank you. We hope you find the guide to be a useful tool. All information was believed to be correct at the time of going to press.

JAPAN

Overseas application of the money lending business act of Japan

Article 3, paragraph 1 of the Money Lending Business Act of Japan (Act No. 32 of 1983; the “MLBA”) provides that any person who intends to engage in the business of money lending must register with the governmental authority of Japan. The MLBA typically applies to cases where a Japanese resident engages in the business of lending money to other Japanese residents. However, it seems unclear whether the MLBA applies to cases where either the lender or the borrower is a non-resident of Japan. This article first discusses outbound cases where an entity located in Japan lends money to borrowers located outside Japan only (but not to borrowers located in Japan), and then discusses inbound cases where an entity located outside Japan lends money to borrowers located in Japan.

Outbound: An Entity Located in Japan Lending Money to Overseas Borrowers Only

In a judicial precedent in 2016 (Judgment dated 12 December, 2016, Tokyo High Court; the “2016 Judgment”), the court had to determine whether the MLBA applied to the case at hand. A Japanese company (“Company X”) had made a loan to a Korean company without prior registration with the governmental authority of Japan. Company X appears to have believed that it was not obligated to register pursuant to the MLBA, since it provided loans to borrowers located outside Japan only. However, the Kanto Local Finance Bureau (which is the competent regulatory authority in Japan) informed Company X that the MLBA also was applicable to Japanese entities engaged in the business of lending money to offshore borrowers only and that Company X could not lend money to the Korean company without prior registration pursuant to the MLBA.

To overcome the requirements under the MLBA, the parent company of Company X transferred 51% of its shares in Company X to the Korean company. Thereafter, Company X became a subsidiary of the Korean company, which meant that Company X could lend money to the Korean company without prior registration pursuant to the MLBA, because a loan made between a parent and its subsidiary is an exempt transaction under the MLBA. Subsequently, Company X, dissatisfied with the regulatory authority’s position, decided to sue the Japanese government, arguing that the MLBA does not apply to cases where a Japanese resident lends money to borrowers located outside Japan only, and, therefore, the regulatory authority’s erroneous interpretation of the provisions of the MLBA forced Company X to take unnecessary remedial measures, which caused harm and loss to Company X.

The court of first instance dismissed Company X’s claim, which was affirmed by the Tokyo High Court (the “Court”). The Court held that as long as a Japanese resident engages in a money lending activity in Japan, it must register pursuant to the MLBA, even in cases where the loans are provided to overseas borrowers only, noting that such interpretation of the MLBA was consistent with the principle of territorial jurisdiction. The Court also held that since Company X disbursed the loan proceeds from Japan to the Korean company, such conduct fell within the scope of money lending, and, therefore, Company X is deemed to have engaged in a money lending business in Japan. The Court further noted that the regulatory purposes of the MLBA (as stated in Article 1 thereof) are to ensure the proper management of business operations by persons engaged in money lending, as well as to protect borrowers, and, as such, persons providing loans to overseas entities only also should be regulated by the MLBA to ensure their proper management of business operations.

Based on the reasoning above, if a money lender is located in Japan, the MLBA would apply to the lender even in cases where prospective borrowers are limited to those based overseas. This reasoning is consistent with the principle of territorial jurisdiction. If a lender does not intend to provide loans to Japanese residents and would prefer not to be subject to the MLBA, it should choose to locate itself outside Japan.

JAPANInbound: An Entity Located outside Japan Lending Money to Borrowers Located in Japan

In cases where a foreign entity (which is located outside Japan) engages in the lending of money to borrowers located in Japan, the generally accepted view is that the lender must register pursuant to the MLBA since one of the purposes of the MLBA is to protect borrowers. This view is reasonable and uncontroversial with respect to foreign non-bank lenders, but its application to foreign banks licensed in their home jurisdictions does not seem to be incontrovertible. If a foreign bank with no Japan branch license as required under the Banking Act of Japan (Act No. 59 of 1981; the “Banking Act”) provides a loan to a Japanese resident, is that bank required to register pursuant to the MLBA despite that bank’s regulation in its home jurisdiction?

In this regard, Article 2, paragraph 1, item 2 of the MLBA offers some guidance; it provides that any person who is authorized to engage in money lending pursuant to “a specific law other than the MLBA” may do so without the need to register pursuant to the MLBA. By virtue of this exemption, Japanese banks (which are authorized to do so under the Banking Act), Japanese insurance companies (which are authorized to do so under the Insurance Business Act of Japan), and other Japanese financial institutions may engage in money lending without prior registration pursuant to the MLBA.

Thus, similarly, it could be argued that a foreign bank with no Japan branch license also may lend money to Japanese residents without prior registration pursuant to the MLBA. However, it should be noted that for the purposes of this exemption, “specific law other than the MLBA” has been generally construed to mean Japanese legislation and not foreign legislation. Therefore, it is unlikely that a foreign bank licensed under the laws of its home country would be able to rely on this exemption, since it is not authorized under Japanese law to engage in money lending. Thus, if a foreign bank intends to provide a loan to a Japanese resident, it should either obtain the branch license in accordance with the Banking Act or register pursuant to the MLBA.

Based on the foregoing interpretation, compliance with requirements under the MLBA would be particularly burdensome for a foreign bank that only occasionally provides loans to Japanese residents.¹ In the case of a large scale syndicated loan transaction for a Japanese borrower, it may be necessary for a deal arranger to invite not only banks located in Japan, but also some foreign banks with no Japan branch license, in order to successfully organize the syndication. However, it is likely that a foreign bank with no Japan branch license would be reluctant to participate in such syndication if doing so would require the foreign bank to either obtain the branch license or to register pursuant to the MLBA.

Alternatively, if a foreign bank with no Japan branch license does not participate in the original syndication, but instead (after the loan is disbursed) purchases the loan from one of the original lenders, it may do so without the branch license or prior registration pursuant to the MLBA, because participating in a loan transaction on a secondary basis by acquiring an outstanding loan receivable (rather than originally disbursing a loan) is not considered to constitute a money lending business regulated by the MLBA. In this regard, according to the official interpretation of the MLBA, if a loan assignee has any influence on the original lender’s decision with respect to the making of a loan and acquires the loan with the intention of repeatedly and continuously doing so, it must register pursuant to the MLBA.

In view of this interpretation, it should be noted that if the foreign bank with no Japan branch license that is expected to purchase the loan following the drawdown is involved in the negotiation of the loan documentation, and its requested terms are reflected in the final loan agreement or it agrees (prior to the drawdown) to purchase the loan, it may be deemed to have exercised some influence on the original lender’s decision, which would possibly obligate it to register pursuant to the MLBA. If that foreign bank chooses to utilize this alternative (i.e., secondary participation in the loan), particular care should be taken to ensure that it does not effectively participate in the negotiation of the loan agreement and merely purchases the loan on a secondary basis.

Masahiro Ueno is a partner at Nishimura & Asahi. His areas of expertise are in securities, finance and banking law with an emphasis on structured finance. He has advised on numerous transactions relating to M&A finance, project finance, real estate finance, and securitization, including the first deals of those types in Japan.

Additionally, his other area of expertise is in the resolution of financial disputes by way of out-of-court negotiation and settlement. Resolving disputes involving specialized and complicated financial transactions often requires profound knowledge and understanding of financial products (including derivatives, structuring techniques, regulatory aspects and so on) as well as market practices. There are very few court precedents dealing directly with such complicated disputes, so litigating these disputes in court would not always lead to an appropriate resolution. Rather, negotiating among the parties to the dispute and their counsel who is familiar with the financial transactions in dispute can facilitate a resolution which has due regard to the circumstances behind the transactions and which would be satisfactory to all the parties. Mr Ueno has handled various types of structured finance transactions and complicated regulatory matters, and has gained extensive experience in relation to those areas. He has sufficient knowledge to appropriately resolve financial disputes because of such experience. He has assisted many clients in resolving difficult financial disputes.

Also, troublesome circumstances may sometimes occur to finance transactions. On many occasions, he has advised on the restructuring of finance transactions that are facing difficulties and might otherwise go into default.

Mr Ueno graduated from the University of Tokyo in 1984 with an LLB and earned an LLM from the University of Pennsylvania Law School in 1991. He is admitted to practice in Japan and New York State. He has authored various articles on Japanese management buy-out transactions, project finance, and syndicated loans. Furthermore, as an international editor (Tokyo) for the Journal of Banking and Finance Law and Practice (an Australian journal), he has written a number of pieces on the development of Japan's finance-related law.

Nishimura & Asahi provides a wide range of services in the area of banking and finance. For example, the firm engages in securitization in all asset classes, fields and structural features. The firm also deals with real estate finance (including the formation of real estate funds and REITs), nonrecourse loans, and issuances of asset backed securities as well as regulatory matters. The firm advises on creating deal structures, solving legal issues, negotiating with various parties and regulatory authorities in Japan and overseas, and preparing and drafting many varieties of documents from contracts to regulatory documents with the aim of devising the market standard, and is actively contributing to the development of structured finance transactions.

STRUCTURED FINANCE AND SECURITISATION

JAPAN

Masahiro Ueno*Nishimura & Asahi

Otemon Tower

1-1-2 Otemachi, Chiyoda-ku

Tokyo 100-8124

Japan

Tel: (81) 3 6250 6207

Email: m.ueno@nishimura.comWebsite: www.nishimura.com

Masahiro Ueno is a partner at Nishimura & Asahi. His areas of expertise are in securities, finance and banking law with an emphasis on structured finance. He has advised on numerous transactions relating to M&A finance, project finance, real estate finance, and securitization, including the first deals of those types in Japan.

Additionally, his other area of expertise is in the resolution of financial disputes by way of out-of-court negotiation and settlement. Resolving disputes involving specialized and complicated financial transactions often requires profound knowledge and understanding of financial products (including derivatives, structuring techniques, regulatory aspects and so on) as well as market practices. There are very few court precedents dealing directly with such complicated disputes, so litigating these disputes in court would not always lead to an appropriate resolution. Rather, negotiating among the parties to the dispute and their counsel who is familiar with the financial transactions in dispute can facilitate a resolution which has due regard to the circumstances behind the transactions and which would be satisfactory to all the parties. Mr Ueno has handled various types of structured finance transactions and complicated regulatory matters, and has gained extensive experience in relation to those areas. He has sufficient knowledge to appropriately resolve financial disputes because of such experience. He has assisted many clients in resolving difficult financial disputes.

Also, troublesome circumstances may sometimes occur to finance transactions. On many occasions, he has advised on the restructuring of finance transactions that are facing difficulties and might otherwise go into default.

Mr Ueno graduated from the University of Tokyo in 1984 with an LLB and earned an LLM from the University of Pennsylvania Law School in 1991. He is admitted to practice in Japan and New York State. He has authored various articles on Japanese management buy-out transactions, project finance, and syndicated loans. Furthermore, as an international editor (Tokyo) for the Journal of Banking and Finance Law and Practice (an Australian journal), he has written a number of pieces on the development of Japan's finance-related law.

Nishimura & Asahi provides a wide range of services in the area of banking and finance. For example, the firm engages in securitization in all asset classes, fields and structural features. The firm also deals with real estate finance (including the formation of real estate funds and REITs), nonrecourse loans, and issuances of asset backed securities as well as regulatory matters. The firm advises on creating deal structures, solving legal issues, negotiating with various parties and regulatory authorities in Japan and overseas, and preparing and drafting many varieties of documents from contracts to regulatory documents with the aim of devising the market standard, and is actively contributing to the development of structured finance transactions.
